2018 SAERI Intern Amy Guest Returns!

First published 23rd December 2020

Two years since I left my last SAERI post as an intern, I have returned! Throughout October and November, I was working for SFL as a Marine Mammal Observer, keeping watch for seals and dolphins during the initial drilling phase of the new port development. Since then, I have been busy with writing my application for a PhD in Marine Ecology with the University of Aberdeen, which (fingers crossed!) will start in January 2021, based here in the Islands for most of the time. Between now and January, I'll be doing lots of background reading and learning the local species using ID books and PhotoQuad.
